To whom it may concern,

To answer the question, Could the Act's operation and effectiveness be improved? In so how?, I would like to respond in the following way.

1. Religious freedom is already harmed in this Act. It provides no protection for those that hold a Christian belief regarding gender and homosexuality. Therefore it seems to be a religious persecution act targeting the Christian community. This is a harmful act of human rights.
2. The only way for the Act to be improved is to restore religious freedom and freedom of speech in being able to pray for another. This is one of the core beliefs in the Christian faith and to punish someone for doing this, is to persecute them for their belief.
